

Abstract

A drug is provided comprising of a degradable gel with a saturated moisture content not exceeding 98 wt. % and a functional material, and which permits control of 5 the rate of release of the functional material and performs controlled-release of the functional material over a prolonged period of time, and wherein the gel itself decomposes and dissipates upon completion of release of the functional material.